FACTS ABOUT BRAZIL AND HOW TO DO BUSINESS IN BRAZIL

Brazil is the largest and most populous country in South America, with the eighth biggest economy in the world. It's a member of the G20, one of the four "BRIC" countries deemed to be a dominant economy by 2050, and recently hosted the 2016 Summer Olympics.

Considering how personal relationships are valued in Brazil's business culture, major trade shows are a way for you to meet potential Brazilian suppliers, but can also be the ideal location to network with industries and organizations to secure a strong presence in Brazil. Some examples of good trade shows and major events to strengthen personal relations in Brazil are the World Travel Market Latin America and Technology and Innovation Leadership Forums in São Jose dos Campos adjacent to São Paulo to mention a few.

BUSINESS CULTURE

Brazil is a diverse nation and its business culture is the same. With São Paulo being Brazil's most internationally-recognized business city, the culture tends to be more Western than other Brazilian cities. An important rule of thumb: the further north you go in Brazil, the more conservative the business culture tends to be.

Brazilian business culture is much more informal and intimate than the United States, with a greater emphasis on the personal relationship made between buyer and seller. Physical contact and close proximity are both common traits of conversing in Brazil, and shouldn't be taken as being impolite or brash.

If you are visiting Brazil and want to learn more about the Brazilian Culture or finding partners in Brazil, the chamber can assist you

BUSINESS COMMUNICATION

Brazilians prefer face-to-face meetings with potential trade partners as opposed to video conferences and emails, as a strong personal relationship is essential to successful business in Brazil.

Learning about Brazilian culture is highly suggested as a potential conversation topic, as Brazilians tend to be very patriotic. In addition, agreeing on areas where Brazil beats the United States, such as in food or sports, helps in building your client relationship.

An engaging conversation with Brazilian business partners can have more of an impact on a deal than what is formally presented to them. Food, art, sports and family are great topics of discussion, while politics and religion should be strictly avoided.

BNCC'S PLANS AHEAD
