MIRALUNA Vineyards with a unique soil diversity, from stone to sandy-loam soils. The height is around 2,600 meters and the thermal amplitude exceeds 20 degrees. These factors are an explosive mix, since they meet ideal conditions for the production of high-end wines. In addition, the rain regime is 140 mm. annual that added to the artisan handling of the vineyard is almost impossible to make bad wines. Its vineyards were planned for the production of wines of great fruit expression and varietal typicity.

LA MALA MARIA

En su manual, las mejores uvas son las que reflejan el esfuerzo de los pequeños productores vitivinícola que hacen de Mendoza la capital del vino argentino. Todos ellos cuentan con un sello internacional de viticultor: la cara quemada por horas de trabajo al sol y manos rotas por el frío.

SECRETO PATAGÓNICO It is one of the smallest wineries in the San Patricio del Chañar Valley, focused on making high-end wines. It is located in the highest sector of its vineyards, allowing naturally to be produced by gravity. In this way, a process with less handling of the grape is achieved. The characteristics of the Patagonian region, great thermal amplitude, constant and intense winds, high solar exposure, low annual rainfall, and pure water from the melting of the Andes; infrastructure, technology and good resource management are added.
