Demolition PINK-PEROBA

ORIGIN

Of South American origin, Peroba Rosa is native to the Atlantic Forest and has been used for centuries in Brazilian civil construction due to its resistance to high and low temperatures.

With the renovation of many buildings, this wood is demolished and sold for use in the manufacture of furniture and art pieces, preserving its original characteristics of resistance and beauty.

Greatest QUALITIES

Resistance

Even though it has been used for years as walls and floors, it does not lose its strength and beauty, it is important to note that a piece of furniture produced with Peroba Rosa can withstand more than 200 kg.

Beauty

Peroba Rosa is named for its most striking feature, which is its rosy tone from the moment you reach deeper layers of the wood. Demolition wood also has a particularity that is found mainly in rustic boards and beams, which are its accentuated veins naturally formed over time, making its pieces even more exclusive.

Natural Anti-Pest

Another singularity of this wood is its natural anti-pest, one of the biggest problems encountered when working with solid wood is pests, Peroba Rosa for its bitter taste in addition to not attracting animals or pests that harm the wood.

Sustainable

As it does not come directly from cutting, solid demolition wood is 100% sustainable, and its manufacturing residues can be totally reused, aiming to reduce the disposal and reuse of such a noble material.

"Having a piece of furniture made of demolition wood collaborates with the environment and the development of new generations, guaranteeing your resources for the future."
