Finca SOPHENIA

GUALTALLARY GIVES ITS WINES ONE OF THE MOST UNIQUE PROFILES OF ARGENTINA, DISTINGUISHING THEM AS SOME OF THE MOST FRESH AND MINERAL IN THE COUNTRY.

Gualtallary is a district located in the department of Tupungato in the Uco Valley, Mendoza.

Tupungato has an ideal microclimate for the slow ripening of the grapes, with a thermal amplitude that allows to reach a great concentration of aromas and flavors.

The combination of height, cold weather and sandy and stony soils results in an ideal natural acidity that gives intense and elegant wines that stand out for their good structure and unique tannic texture.

IG Gualtallary: Sub Region RIO
Altitude 4000 feet above sea level.
Low rainfall. (200 mm/anual).
Rocky soil of loose structure, result of the erosion from the Andes Mountains

Gualtallary

Finca SOPHENIA

> Based at the northern end of the valley, this is the most recently developed of the Uco's terroirs. And yet it's arguably the one with the most potential, having both the highest altitudes (up to 1,700 metres) and the greatest concentration of calcium carbonate.

Tim Atkim, Argentina
REPORT 2020

> I am a fan of diversity. The Malbec strain can occur in China, in France (from where it is original) or anywhere else. But when I orden a Wine from Mendoza, Gualtallary, I´m talking about that unique place.

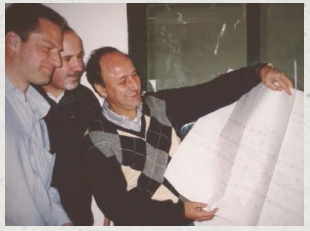

Luis Gutierrez, Wine Advocate. Diario Clarin Newspaper,
August 2018

ALTOSUR
Malbec 2021

"It's fair to say that no other country delivered value in this year's DWWA to match that sent over to us from Argentina, and this saturatedly dense, dark Malbec from the prized highlands of Gualtallary makes this point admirably. It's initially beefy and purposeful in aroma, the plum and sloe fruits emerging in purer form with time in the glass or the decanter. There's admirable weight, lyricism and lift to those fruits: Gualtallery is never clumsy. Better still, in place of overt tannins and intrusive acidity there is a kind of sappy, stemmy freshness which combines the function of both texture and acidity - and that, in fact, is the origin of the fruit's notable energy and charm. Value Best In Show wines rarely exceed the appeal you'll find here."
